HIGH HOPES FOR RECOVERY OF NATION'S CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

which all nations can take in concert, which they are now justified in enforcing. The common enemy ought to be exterminated, as he can be by joint international action of great nations.

The Telegraph says: "When the British empire was plunged into grief by the close of the great and glorious reign of Queen Victoria, the genuine sorrow manifested by all classes in the United States proved to us that they felt our loss as their own. Sympathy can only be repaid with sympathy. There is nothing in the internal conditions of the United States upon whose exuberant prosperity we dwell only two days ago with justifiable pride, or in its external relations, which could account for the existence of the passions that breed assassinations. Assassination and incitement to assassination are not political, but anti-social offenses. Those guilty do not strike against a particular form of government, but at all organized defense of law and order. In the vast majority of cases the man who presses the trigger is morally less a villain than the coward whose denunciations he translates into action."

The Mail says: "President McKinley has been a wise and far-seeing ruler. He was the first to recognize clearly the necessity for the expansion of the United States. His period of office will always be remembered as the epoch in the foundation of the American empire began. He is not, perhaps, a great statesman, but is a man of plain, sterling sense."

The Mail thinks that it is notoriety and publicity which in most cases leads a criminal to perpetrate such atrocities, and says that if the criminal could be dealt with on the spot one great inducement to crime would be removed. There is no reason why rulers, it says, should not be accompanied by one or two armed men, who, in such cases, would have orders to shoot, and shoot at once.

The News, writing under the impression that the president's wounds are mortal, says: "A brave, upright governor of men perishes in the execution of his duty. He was a typical American. In this country he might have been attorney-general or director of a big business. In America he was twice president, and his imperturbable self-reliance and belief in the destiny of his country made him the most representative of presidents. His last speech sounded the note of commercial empire with which his name will be associated. He was the first president to expound the imperial idea, which has played havoc with old party lines in America, as it has done here."

The Standard says: "All fustian about vindicating the rights of the poor and avenging the wrongs done by government is but vicious gloss to disguise brutal instincts and vice. The deaths of Lincoln and Garfield differ from the present crime. President McKinley is the first who has been marked for doom in pursuance of a conspiracy which at one time was supposed to be directed exclusively against inheritors of monarchical tradition."

The Chronicle says that the closest possible alliance between the police of all nations and the greatest vigilance within each country are the only effective weapons society has against the common enemy.

It adds: "On political grounds as well as on the grounds of humanity, it would be a grievous calamity if McKinley does not recover. The president stands for a policy and an epoch. His work is not concluded. To the president himself, who is bearing the blow with so much quiet courage, to the devoted wife and the whole American nation, the sympathy of the British people goes out with unstinted sincerity in this hour of grievous anxiety."

The Graphic declares that President McKinley was wounded because his position, won by sheer hard work and singleness of purpose, marked him as a target for a homicidal imbecile.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7, 1901.

Editor Advertiser—I have mailed you fuller account in papers than I can possibly write you of the awful tragedy that has been enacted here at the Pan-American.

I had the pleasure of attending the reception given by the president in the Government Building on the 6th. As I stepped up to him I remarked: "Mr. President, I present you greetings from Hawaii." He replied: "I thank you, sir. I am glad Hawaii is represented here today." And saying so, he gave me a hearty and cordial pressure of the hand. He seemed so genial and happy in meeting people on such an occasion, that it seemed furthest from any human thought that a demon mind was then plotting the murder of so calm and noble a specimen of true manhood, but such it was, and in twenty-four hours after my meeting the president, in an adjoining building on the grounds, the demon in human form accomplished his purpose. It was a fearful blow! All over the grounds could be heard curses and imprecations, and could the people have secured the wretch I believe their fierce rage would have known no control. A hush and stillness fell on all that great multitude of thousands within the exposition grounds. Men of strong minds and hearts and wills dropped the "sympathizing tear." The boisterous cryer on the "Midway" hushed his voice and the strains of music ceased. Sadness in place of merriment fell on all. Entertainments ceased and all came to a stoppage. The electric lights were cut off for a while, and every one waited with abated breath the bulletins which issued from the physicians' stands within the exposition grounds. Men of strong minds and hearts and wills dropped the "sympathizing tear." The boisterous cryer on the "Midway" hushed his voice and the strains of music ceased. There was spread about during the morning a report that the ship was coming with flags at half-mast. This gave credence to the report of the death of the president, and there was more than ordinary interest all over the city, and more than expected telephone calls for news of the condition of the Executive.

But when the Ventura came near it was seen that her flag was in its accustomed place at the head, which could mean nothing other than the president was living when the ship left San Francisco.

It was past 9 o'clock when the first news of the condition of the president was received by the waiters on shore, but it was so reassuring that there was no further comment but that of joy, that there was so little danger of the worst from the wounds from which the Chief Magistrate is suffering. The news spread rapidly, and the men who got it went through the city telling their friends all along the streets, until it was known to all those who gathered about bulletin boards and who had been on the sidewalks during the hours prior to the issuance of specials that the news was reassuring.

There was no effect upon the markets, as a result of the news, as the fact that New York and San Francisco had taken up the matter without any flurry, gave the speculators here nothing upon which to work for a sensation. Thus it was that the stocks showed no action at all, which could be traced to this cause. Among the men of the streets there was a feeling that there would be no trouble unless the case of the president should take a turn for the worse.

Upon all sides there was a general expression of horror for the act and of sorrow for the sufferer. Again there was a feeling that the life of the president was vital to the people here, for he has shown an appreciation of the situation which has had a great effect upon the inauguration of the new government, and has given the people confidence in his administration.

It was in a private letter from Mr. Rithet of Welch & Co., that Senator Carter learned of the death of the people of the United States to have a day of thanksgiving upon the recovery of the president. The statement was that the announcement would be made as soon as there was no further danger from the wounds from which Mr. McKinley now suffers, and that the observance of the day would be universal and impressive.

All the returning travellers say that there is no word other than of praise for the Executive uttered all through the country, and the feeling is that there is so much of the present peace and prosperity due to his sagacity and clearness of purpose, that while there is apprehension for the future, the faith of the people is in the ultimate recovery of the president.

Here there was no other expression but that of esteem and affection. From all the officials of the government there came the same utterance as to the great wisdom, foresight and capacity of the Executive, and the expression of hope for his quick recovery. Governor Dole prepared and sent on by Secretary Cooper his condolences.

Should there be a National Day of Thanksgiving for the recovery of the president, there will be much made of the occasion here.

WELLINGTON'S
HEARTLESS WORDSA Senator Who Has No Sympathy
With the President.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 7.—A morning paper here publishes an interview with United States Senator George L. Wellington, given in Cumberland, upon the receipt of the news of the attempt upon the life of President McKinley, in which Senator Wellington is quoted as saying:

"McKinley and I are enemies. I have nothing good to say about him, and, under the circumstances, I do not care to say anything bad. I am indifferent to the whole matter."

The attention of the Senator was directed to the matter this morning with a request for a denial or affirmation of the words attributed to him. He flatly declined to give either.

Wellington is being expelled from local clubs.

CHINESE DECISIONS.

Department Holds That Ignorance of Registration Law is No Excuse.

Two important decisions affecting Chinese cases have been made at Washington. The Chronicle reports the decision relative to Chinamen in custody at San Francisco, as follows:

"The provisions of the Chinese exclusion act of 1888 direct that a Chinese who retains certain interests in the United States may, upon departure, obtain a certificate which entitles him to re-entrance within the boundaries within the space of one year. In case of illness an extension of one year may be obtained upon application to the nearest United States consul."

"The detained Chinese returned after the limitation of their original certificate had expired and without renewal from the consul at the port of departure. The Chinese consul general requested executive clemency in their behalf, inasmuch as a number of them had sailed before the date of the ruling which made the present interpretation of the statutes in force. That ruling was made by the solicitor of the treasury upon the 13th of June last. Word was received today from Washington that ignorance formed no basis of excuse in the present case, and that the Chinese would have to be sent back. Their agents state that they will promptly obtain the year's extension of time, which it is possible for them to get from a United States representative in China upon evidence of inability to comply with the limitations of the first certificate.

"The second ruling received yesterday overrules a previous decision. It is to the effect that all sons of Chinese resident merchants who are under 21 are admissible within the boundaries. The prior ruling had been to the effect that only sons who were too young to act as laborers could be admitted. This decision was made at Washington by F. A. Reeve, Solicitor of the Treasury Department, on the 10th of August."

MEN! DO YOU!

Do you want to be strong? Do you want to feel the vim, the snap and fire of manly vigor? Do you want courage, energy and ambition to support you in your cares and troubles?

I have devoted my life to the development of manly and womanly vigor. I've made a great success. My methods are approved by the greatest doctors and copied.

I've proven that electricity is the basis of all animal life and that "weak men," dyspeptics, rheumatics, sufferers from lost energy, weak kidneys, pains in the back, head, chest and shoulders from varicocoe and its allied weaknesses, etc., are weak in electricity. My Electric Belt restores his life in a few weeks and cures every time. If it fails I ask no pay.

Describe your case to me, and if I say I can cure you I will guarantee to do so.

Drugs won't restore your strength. They only stimulate. If you have to take a stimulant, take whisky. Taken in moderation it does less harm than the others.

"Every sign of pain and weakness has disappeared. I appreciate what your Belt has done for me," writes J. Schwarz, Coleridge, Trinity County, Cal.

I will gladly send you my book on this subject. It has 32 pages of meat to people who want more "fire." Sealed, free.

CAUTION.—Makers of old-style, blistering and burning belts are now offering imitations of my Belts and Electrodes. LOOK OUT FOR THEM.

I take imitations of my belt. Call today or write. I mine line. Consultations free. In trade, just to show how much better mine line.
